

I would just like to voice my concern for the present changes to allow less diversity of media ownership. I think this can only harm the quality and fairness of viewpoints from disparate media outlets. It seems from my personal observations that the current mainstream media is barely able to distinguish its points of view from outlet to outlet. This new rule change will make plain vanilla even more plain and will only benefit the bottom lines of the largest media moguls not the general public who owns the airwaves. So I say no to the liberalisation of broadcast ownership rules.
